SEMINAR

A Tuesday lunch in April 1988 launched our speaker Tom Gautsch into a realm of curiosity – testing human lifespan. This presentation covers the tongue-in-cheek conjecture of “Making up your mind to live to the age of 105” to seeing what forces are in play in our culture to help us attain this goal. Tom is a two-time cancer survivor and a facilitator in cancer support groups since 1993. He formerly called this presentation “Goal Setting at Age 105” but has decided he needs to think farther out. Come and enjoy this funny and crazy experiment in what the human mind can conjure. You might even start thinking “YOU CAN DO IT!”

PRESENTER

After serving as an officer in the US Air Force, Tom Gautsch settled in Albuquerque and worked in real estate for many years. In 1982 he founded Innovative Business Controls of New Mexico, Inc., a leader in records management and storage. Tom is a member of the Albuquerque Kiwanis Club, has served on many community boards, and is a speaker on Continual Improvement in Service and motivational topics to various professional societies and civic groups. He has also served as a guest lecturer on Ethics in Business at the UNM Robert O. Anderson School of Business.
